

DEED OF ASSIGNMENT

Use and completion of this form

Please note:

- Where the policy is being assigned to more than one beneficiary or assignee the policy will be deemed to be held jointly unless we are informed otherwise. Please seek specialist legal advice if there is more than one beneficiary or assignee to receive the benefit of the policy.
- Any trust to which the policy is or may be subject must be considered and regard must be had to the nature of the policy and any contractual provisions regarding ownership.

This form has only been designed for policies and trust forms issued by Royal London (and the divisions known as Bright Grey and Scottish Provident).

The form covers the situation of an assignment of a policy by:

1. An absolute owner to another person absolutely, e.g. where no trust is involved
2. An absolute owner to trustees of an existing trust
3. Trustees to a beneficiary, to satisfy the interest of the beneficiary in the trust fund, if:
 - the person is a beneficiary under an absolute trust, or
 - the trustees have irrevocably appointed the trust fund or part of it to the beneficiary.

Once signed, a copy of the form must be returned to us for noting. The original deed should be kept with the policy documents and any original declaration of trust.

Note: PLEASE USE BLOCK CAPITALS

United Kingdom Tax – note

The following note gives some indication of the tax treatment of life policies assigned in the United Kingdom. The correct treatment is not straightforward. Any Income Tax due if a chargeable event arises, any Capital Gains Tax due on disposal of a policy which has been assigned for value or any Inheritance Tax (IHT) due if a policy is gifted may depend on:

- the relationship between the parties involved in the assignment
- the reason for the assignment (e.g. whether the policy is assigned by way of gift or for money or money's worth, or as part of a divorce settlement)
- whether the policy is being fully or partially assigned
- whether other withdrawals have been made in the same tax year as the assignment
- the way in which the policy and the deed of assignment are structured.

It may be advisable to take specialist advice before assigning a policy if there is any doubt as to the correct treatment.

Assignments between married individuals

Assignments between spouses actually living together at the time of the assignment will not be a chargeable event. However a chargeable event may arise if the individuals are separated unless it is part of a separation agreement.

Assignments on divorce

Assignments as part of the financial arrangements of a divorce settlement where a Court Order applies will not be a chargeable event. However a chargeable event may arise if the assignment is part of a divorce where no Court Order applies or if there is a pre-nuptial agreement.

Full assignment as a gift

If a policy is fully assigned by way of gift, no chargeable event will arise, although the assignment will be considered a gift for IHT purposes. The new owner will be treated as if the policy had always belonged to them.

Partial assignment as a gift

If a policy is partially assigned as a gift, no chargeable event will arise. A partial assignment can take place if, say:

- for a policy in single ownership, individual A assigns the policy to himself and individual B so that it is now in joint ownership, or
- for a policy in joint ownership, individual A and individual B assign the policy to individual B so that it is now in single ownership.

Assignments for money or money's worth – tax treatment for the “seller” of a policy

If a full or partial assignment of a policy is made for money or ‘money's worth’, a chargeable event may arise for the individual disposing of the policy. Broadly, a full assignment will be treated as if the policy is being surrendered (based on the consideration or market value). A partial assignment will be treated as a part surrender of a policy, based on a corresponding percentage of the surrender value, with tax treatment mirroring that of a partial withdrawal from the policy.

Assignments for money or money's worth – tax treatment for the “purchaser” of a policy

The purchaser of all or part of a policy may have to pay Capital Gains Tax on subsequent disposal. However, any amount charged to Income Tax arising from a chargeable event may be deducted from the proceeds for capital gains purposes to avoid double taxation.

Gifts into trust

An assignment into trust will generally be for no value and there will generally be no chargeable event (unless, for example, the assignment is part of a reciprocal arrangement under a Business Trust). Assignment into trust will be a gift for IHT purposes and will have varying consequences depending on the specific trust circumstances.

Transfer by Trustees to a beneficiary under a trust

An assignment out of a trust will again generally be treated as an assignment for no value. There will generally be no chargeable event. However, the assignment will have varying IHT consequences depending on the type of trust being used.
